HONORS PROGRAM APPLICATION

The LSUS Honors Program offers qualified, motivated students small, interdisciplinary classes, an exclusive study center and lounge, preferred registration, and a range of programming activities that are not available to any other students on the campus. The small, seminar-based classes are interdisciplinary and team-taught by PhD faculty. Most classes will satisfy general education requirements. Please contact Dr. Webster at 797-5376 or linda.webster@lsus.edu for further information.

To the Applicant:

APPLICATION TO THE HONORS PROGRAM

In addition to providing information for the form (above), please submit an original 400-500 word essay. Please be sure to include your name, student ID number, and the words “Honors Program Application” on any material you provide.

HONORS PROGRAM ESSAY

Please respond to the following in approximately 400-600 words:
Wallace Bacon, a recipient of an honorary doctorate from Emerson College in 1975, wrote that the liberal arts, or humanities, “are concerned with the question of what makes life worthwhile. And that question concerns not simply oneself but others. The humanities must help us learn who we are; they must help us learn the otherness of others.” In this light, describe an encounter with someone or something different—an “other” which revealed to you your sense of self and your relation to humanity.

Materials should be submitted to:
